Biographical Overview

Kathleen Ruiz is an internationally exhibiting media artist who creates interactive simulations, games, installations, sculpture and photography. Her work explores issues about perception, behavior, interaction and the confluence of the imaginary and the real, inviting inquiry into how conceptual constructs are built and how they serve to shape ethics and power.

Portraying the promise of technology as well as its frightening, fascinating and humorous contradictions, Ruiz poses questions about the oxymoron of virtual violence, catharsis, and desensitization in simulated space. She builds simulated and physical places where multiple viewpoints can be explored and expanded, while challenging us to simultaneously perceive perspectives of the observer, the observed and the process of observation.

Kathleen's recent scholarly and artistic work explores the innate, but oftentimes overlooked, ability to use simulation to study intentionality, multiple perspectives and potential non-colonizing approaches towards understanding and acceptance of the "other". Her work considers games and simulations as cultural artifacts reflecting how a society expresses gender, race, and behavior.

Kathleen's work is supported by grants from the Mid-Atlantic Arts Foundation Visual Arts Residency Award, Connecticut Council on the Arts Award, the New York City Department of Cultural Affairs Percent for Art Commission for permanent public art, the New York State Council on the Arts Exhibition Grant, the Experimental Television Center Grant, the National Science Foundation, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the New York State Council on the Arts Individual Artist award. Recent work was also funded by Sony Computer Entertainment, Europe.

She has exhibited at numerous galleries, museums and alternative spaces in the United States, Mexico, Europe, South America, and Asia and her work was reviewed/published in the New York Times, Aperture, Art News, ARTI, Jornal do Brasil, The College Art Journal, The MIT Press, Reuters Video News International, Computer Graphics, Yale University Art Gallery, Wired, USA Today, arteTV, Kultur: Deutsche Welle, TeknoKultura, and others.

Current Artistic Research

* The Other: an interactive 3D simulation that explores the theme of multiple perspectives through different characters, each with their own viewpoint, in a dynamic environment showing how one's actions and decisions affect others environmentally, socially, and culturally.

* Telomere: a multimedia ballet exploring conceptions of age and agelessness in a triumph of the human spirit while the inevitable collapse of body occurs through time. "Telomere" uses the biological process of cell division as a metaphor for the life process of a prima ballerina. In an alchemic interweaving of art and science, the many aspects of aging are experienced physically, socially, psychologically, spiritually and emotionally.

* ErGoGenic Research Group: (co-founder), a trans-disciplinary team of artists, composers, cognitive scientists, medical doctors, psychologists, and game designers who are developing physical interfaces and bio-feedback to directly affect gameplay and interaction in games/simulations to encourage reaching and maintaining healthy levels of cardiovascular activity. This group is also working on games which aim to approach satiation through psycho/physio interaction.

* Capability Games and Simulation: (co-founder) an interdisciplinary group of programmers, artists, engineers, and composers who are developing interactive multimedia game simulation modules for differently abled people to help in learning basic life skills for independence through fun, repetition and engagement. Visual/auditory stimulation and memory systems are being developed in conjunction with innovative interface modalities tailored for individuals who have sustained brain injuries or who are physically and/or mentally handicapped.

* Multi-Sensory Media Art expanding beyond the eye/ear metaphor using olfaction, proprioception, EEG/EKG, and other emerging interfaces/delivery systems.

* Nanosculptures: and the interplay of macro and nano structures: The area of nanotechnology holds potential creative territory for new kinds of artistic/scientific/philosophical/environmental/medical/ethical discourse and collaboration. Evolving preliminary ideas for nano dimension projects which consider physical phenomena and new perceptive environments emerging from nanoscale research could include fascinating super-mini objects, larger frameworks for virtual and physical three dimensional "sculptures and terrains" which would act as catalysts for opening much needed thoughtful and critical dialogues.

* Playable Art: physically and environmentally stimulating fine art sculpture and environments for touching, hearing, seeing, climbing, jumping, exploring, imagining, and cooperating for fun, enjoyment and education.

Teaching Interests

* Experimental Game Design: a multidisciplinary studio arts course focusing on the creation of innovative workable game prototypes using a variety of multimedia approaches, methodologies and materials. Games are analyzed as cultural artifacts reflecting behavior, social formation, and the representation of gender, ethnicity and identity. Alternate works that go beyond existing shooter-type paradigms and emerging forms are encouraged.

* Advanced Integrated Arts: Open to Institute-wide Ph.D. and graduate students, this course uses integrated multidisciplinary inquiry and creative studio practice to expand inventiveness and to explore the potentials and the impacts of our own contemporary technological, scientific, social, and artistic research as it unfolds in the context of the larger world and across Arts, Cognitive Science, Science, Computer Science, Architecture, and Engineering.

* Advanced Digital Imaging: An upper level studio exploring individual visual arts projects contributing to culminating experience, thesis or dissertation development. Topics and projects in creative personal expression in imaging, installation, and mixed media practices are explored drawing from issues raised in class projects. Projects in high resolution digital photography, painting, illustration, processing, printing, as well as physical assemblage, and projection are conducted.

* Perception and Art (in formation)

* Nano Perspectives: Multidisciplinary Explorations in Art and Nanotechnology (in formation)

* Advanced Topics in Simulation (in formation)

* Multi-Sensory Media Art expanding beyond the eye/ear metaphor (using olfaction, proprioception, EEG/EKG interfaces, etc.) (in formation)

Teaching/Professional

1997-present Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute
Department of the Arts
Troy, N.Y.

Associate Professor of Integrated Arts (2003-present)
(Assistant Professor 1997-2003)

Creating and developing undergraduate and graduate programs and curriculum in the visual and integrated arts including studio and studio/seminar courses in Advanced Integrated Arts, Experimental Game Design, Advanced Digital Imaging, Intermediate Digital Imaging, Virtual Environments, Advanced 3D Projects, Media Arts Studio, Cyberarts, Photography, Animation, Creative Design in Information Technology, and emerging genres.

Undergraduate advising and research project supervision. Graduate and doctoral thesis chairing and advisement, and coordination of graduate teaching assistants. Artistic research in interactive simulation, multisensory multimedia, motion capture, advanced digital imaging/photography, motion tracking and critical trans-disciplinary projects. Academic committee assignments within the department and in university-wide interdisciplinary curriculum endeavors, faculty and administrative searches, advisory panels and grant writing. Helped to formulate the Visual Arts and Animation Working Group to help colleagues, clinical faculty, graduate teaching assistants, and staff discuss issues and ways to improve our programs using strengths in traditional fine arts practice, digital arts practice, and emerging experimental genres.

Research and recommend hardware, software, cameras, printers and studio design. Member, Gen/Net: A Gender, Science and Technology Group. Co-authored the Minor in Game Studies at Rensselaer, and co-authored the trans-disciplinary Major in Game Simulation Arts & Science (GSAS). Recommend and co-ordinate symposia and visiting lecture series in interdisciplinary studies in the arts. Founding member of the multidisciplinary ErGoGenic Game Research Group and the CapAbility Games Research Project.

1988 - 1997 New York University
Department of Art and Arts Professions
New York, N.Y.

Associate Professor, part time

Helped to establish and develop the Art in Digital Media Program. Created curriculum at the graduate and undergraduate level to explore the use of computers in art making. The program is specifically designed to demystify the technology and empower the artist with the necessary skills for: two dimensional work including digital photography, painting, & printmaking, three dimensional virtual sculptural works, animated interactive installations, digital video, and innovative exploration of the computer as a tool for augmenting creative thought. Courses created and taught included: "Advanced Projects in Art and Media: Computer Art I & II," "Projects in Art and Media: Computer Art I & II," "Introduction to Computer Art", and "Digital Photography I & II". Advising students on independent study projects in digital media, Contributed on-going technical consultation for software and hardware purchases, creating interdisciplinary bridges both within the Department of Art and with other departments and schools within the University, coordinated and conducted research and development for computers in the arts, consulted in the recommendation of studio lab facilities, coordinated the guest artist/critics program, designed materials, events and web site art exhibitions to promote the work of the students of the Art in Digital Media program throughout the department, the university, and the local, regional and international community.

1991 - 1997 School of Visual Arts
Master of Fine Arts, Computer Art Program
New York, N.Y.

Member of MFA Faculty

Responsibilities included the creation of new curriculum, the teaching of advanced studio/seminar courses at the graduate level for students exploring digital media for artistic expression and visualization utilizing computer technology to augment and expand artistic conceptualization. Advisement and chairing of student MFA thesis projects.

1990 - 1992 Scholastic Software Inc.
New York, N.Y.

Artist, animator and interface designer Projects included Operation Frog (Mac based interactive virtual dissection program), Timeline (an innovative interactive program of American history from 1492 to the present), and others.

1988 - 1991 The Hippocrates Project
New York University School of Medicine
New York, N.Y.

Design director of interactive medical courseware for first and second year medical school curriculum and for physician scholars including subjects ranging from EEG, psychology, neurobiology, cell biology, molecular biology (the polymerase chain reaction) and others. Research and development of animation and scientific visualization systems. Created and conducted seminars in the design and implementation of computer based courseware.

1986 - 1989 N.Y.C. Department of Health
Bureau of Public Health Education
Media Services Unit
New York, N.Y.

Designer/Consultant for communications promoting public health. Researched and purchased hardware and software for computer imaging and trained art staff in the use of computer systems for desktop publishing.

1981 - 1997 Multi-media designer and consultant for major corporate accounts and institutions

- Citibank
- Ford
- AT&T
- Wendy's
